STATE AGENCY AND DEPARTMENT REPORTS

California Department of Public Health Zika Virus Disease Update

The Medical and Health Coordination Center (MHCC) continues to be activated in response to the Zika Virus Disease (Zika) in order to aggregate and update information from a variety of sources and coordinate response activities across the California Department of Public Health (CDPH).

- CDPH centers and programs will assist in providing information related to their specific activities on a weekly basis. This information will be collected and included in a weekly Public Health and Medical Emergency Function (EF) 8 Situation Report released by the MHCC. The MHCC will manage requests for information from the public, healthcare facilities, and local health districts and ensure responses are timely and accurate during a time of evolving information.
- Zika is transmitted to people primarily through the bite of an infected Aedes Aegyptus mosquito (also known as yellow fever mosquitoes) and Aedes Albopictus mosquito (also known as Asian tiger mosquitoes), which are not native to California. Today, more than 60 countries have documented Zika virus transmission, with over 40 reporting their first outbreak within recent months. The most common symptoms of Zika are fever, rash, joint pain, and conjunctivitis (red eyes). The illness is usually mild with symptoms lasting for several days to a week after being bitten by an infected mosquito. People usually don't get sick enough to go to the hospital, and very rarely die of Zika. For this reason, many people might not realize they have been infected. However, Zika virus infection during pregnancy can cause a serious birth defect called microcephaly, as well as other severe fetal brain defects.
- The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, (CDC), CDPH, Emergency Medical Services Authority (EMSA), California Governor's Office of Emergency Services (Cal OES), State level EF 08 partners, continue to prepare for the management of Zika cases in California. Reporting of select notifiable diseases is mandated by state law in California through Title 17 California Code of Regulations and Zika is now a notifiable disease that must be reported.
- CDPH continues to work with the healthcare community and local health jurisdictions to identify potential suspect cases and avoid spread of the disease. New guidelines and updated guidelines released by CDC are posted on the CDPH website available at: (<http://www.cdph.ca.gov/HealthInfo/discond/Pages/Zika.aspx>). CDPH and local health jurisdictions are monitoring the situation closely and are taking steps to keep the public safe.
- EMSA and the EMSA Duty Officer Program continue to monitor the situation and remain in communication with the Regional Disaster Medical Health Specialists (RDMHS) and Medical Health Operational Area Coordinator (MHOAC) Programs.
- Please see attached for full report

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

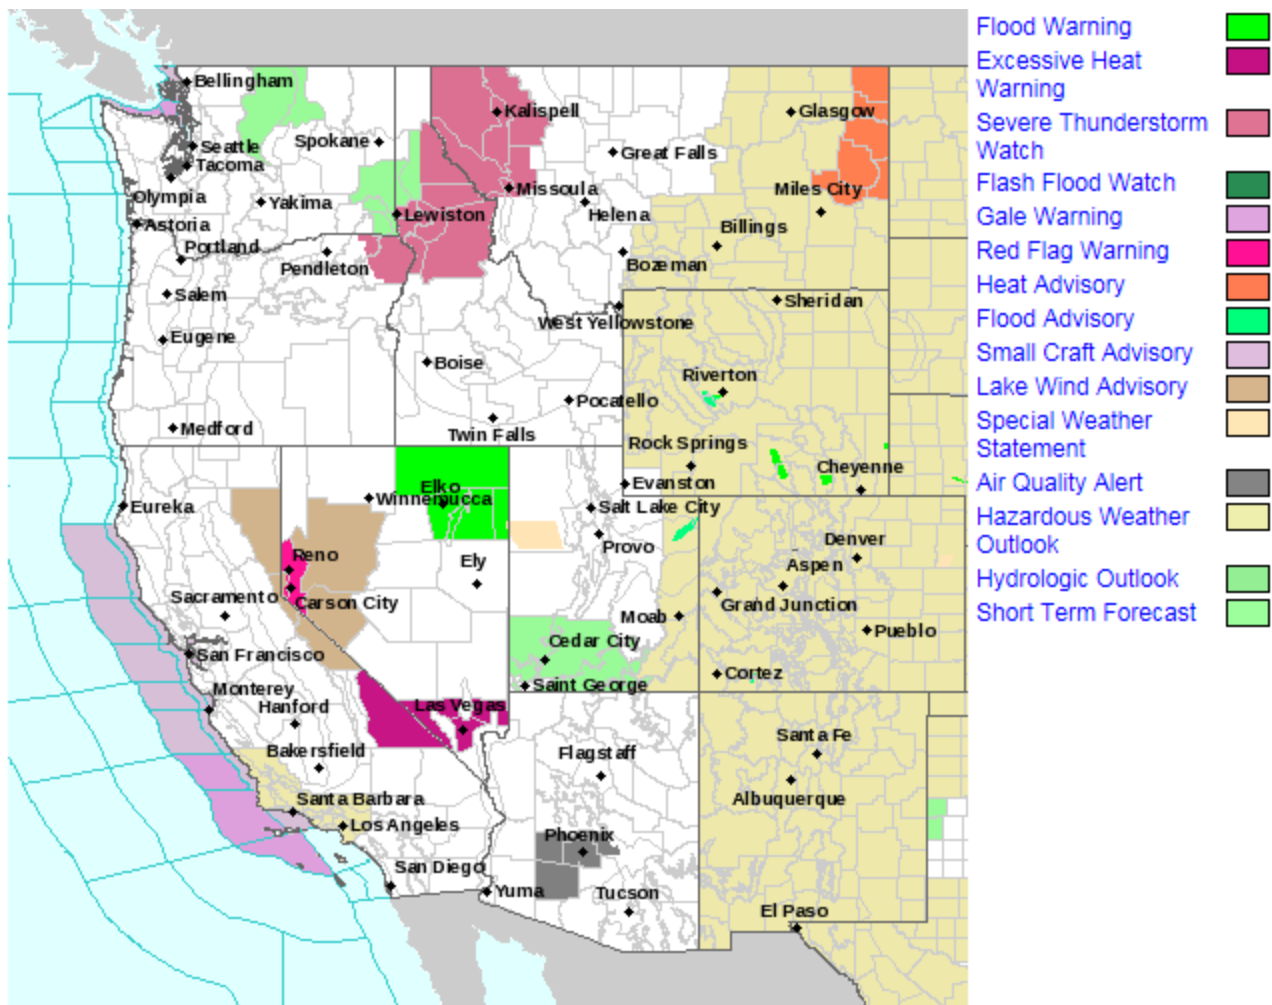

A low pressure trough centered just off shore has taken over our weather pattern and will be lingering over the region well into the weekend. There will be some light showers in the far northern areas near the Oregon border at times through Saturday, but wetting rain (0.10 inch) will be hard to come by even for areas that have several precipitation events. Relative Humidity (RH) will be higher in all areas, however, and provide some benefit as it will remain higher for some duration. Gusty south to northwest afternoon winds in particular will be in place into the weekend with lighter overnight winds in most areas. Those afternoon west to northwest winds will be most common in the western counties and mountains, southerly winds in the Sacramento Valley and southwest over the rest of the area. Sustained wind speeds will reach 10-15 mph with gusts around 25-30 in windy areas, which will mostly be along higher terrain and in the larger lower elevation valleys. Gusts may reach 35-40 mph locally at times. Significantly cooler temperatures will be in place through Saturday with seasonably warm conditions meaning afternoon highs will mostly be in the mid to upper 80s for the warmest inland locations. Weak high pressure is expected to move through the region Sunday, but another low pressure trough will drop south out of the Gulf of Alaska early next week. So while a bit warmer conditions are anticipated Sunday and Monday (low and mid 90s in the warmest inland areas), it will cool down significantly next Tuesday into Wednesday. The gusty afternoon wind conditions are likely to continue early next week as well.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A ridge over Southern California will continue to produce above normal temperatures across inland areas. Yesterday, while the beaches and intermediate valleys remained relatively cool, inland valleys topped 90 degrees with the San Joaquin Valley and lower Sierra Foothills saw readings over 100. Temperatures this afternoon will be a degree or two warmer with highs reaching well into the 70s in the mountains above 6,000 feet, mid to upper 90s in the valleys and 100-105 in the San Joaquin Valley. Some high clouds will filter the sunshine from time to time, but they won't be long lasting enough to impact temperatures today. A trough over the Pacific Northwest will strengthen before moving onshore toward the end of the week which will result in a cooling trend beginning Thursday. Late tonight into Thursday morning, northerly pressure gradients will develop which may allow local winds of 15-25 mph across Santa Barbara and the I-5 Corridor. Minimum RH should remain above 25% in these areas. The trough will produce breezy conditions across many areas tomorrow. Thursday afternoon, expect northwest winds of 15-25 mph along the central coast with westerly winds gusts up to 40 mph in the desert interface regions during the afternoon. Finally, south winds up to 30 mph will be possible in the Owens Valley Thursday and Friday. The marine layer will deepen the next few days and some patchy drizzle and low clouds will likely reach the lower coastal slopes Friday and Saturday. Temperatures will fall to a bit below normal over most areas Thursday through the weekend with highs only in the lower to mid 80s in the valleys, upper 80s in the San Joaquin Valley to 95 in the warmest desert locations. Long range models indicate slightly warmer weather may arrive during the first half of next week, but overall, expect temperatures the next two weeks to remain near normal overall. No rainfall is expected over Central and Southern California through the period.
